Yo Britt,

I had a doctor's appointment up at Harborview Hosp. today and walked over to the Frye Art Museum afterwards as they are only a few blocks apart. Most of the museum is taken over with a puppet show. I was quite taken with it and spent a couple of hours. There were lots of traditional puppets along with some pretty far-out contemporary stuff, from a woman in Paris, for instance.

Also there were many videos running of puppet shows including some really great shadow-puppet shows. I really enjoyed it and found it very inspirational. I know I will help create a puppet show sometime.

So I think the show is up for another month or so and if you happened to come up to Seattle be sure to see it. I wasn't so blown away by it that I recommend you make a special trip, but if you are up here anyway….

Hope all is well with you and you have a great Labor Day weekend,

Jim
