PS,

How was Folk Life? I know Deborah Moffit went all four days and I went briefly on Sunday with Janet and Ed. We were actually on our way to see the film on the Hubble telescope at IMAX. Folk Life is one of Seattle's better events, along with SIFF, currently in progress. Anything worth seeing?

The main reason I am writing you is that I am writing Rita a longish letter and wondered what you think about me casually mentioning that with the U's budget cuts you might be interested in a Fulbright musician? I would phrase it as a casual aside, not a relayed request. But knowing I might be out of line in mentioning it I thought I would ask you.

Linley was in Seattle and we went for coffee. Because of a sports game at the stadium the streets were all blocked off and Linley suggested a coffee shop she had driven by up on the hill rather then try and get to Zeitgeist. I said sure and the shop she had spotted was Victrolas! And, you know, their coffee really is superior. Next time we go for coffee let's go there again, okay? And I hope it is not too far in the future. Hoping your professorial duties are easing off by now.

So let me know about the letter to Rita. I just thought it might help you both.

Best,

Jim
